Teaching

Teaching interests include audit and assurance services, fraud, data analytics, managerial accounting, and international financial reporting. In most recent years, I have taught accounting courses with a primary emphasis in managerial accounting, auditing and forensic accounting, at the undergraduate and graduate levels. I was awarded several times the Faculty's Teaching Honor Roll. I have successfully integrated technology into the learning environment of my courses. In all my courses, I use Canvas allowing students access to discussion groups which have greatly enhance their learning capacity as well as providing them with ancillary materials and web links to enrich the in-class learning environment. In close cooperation with KPMG, I developed a course in Forensic Accounting with Data Analytics, which was first offered in spring 2019. I subsequently developed a fraud course for the KPMG Master of Science in Accounting with cognitive analytics, which was delivered online in summer 2020, and introduces professionals to a variety of data analytics and artificial intelligence tools. I provide students with most current materials through a weekly briefing of accounting and auditing developments. I continuously strive to link my current research and/or relevant research to the topics I teach, allowing students to understand better the important symbiotic relationship in accounting and auditing between research and practice. In spring 2021, I piloted a Virtual Global Learning initiative between Beedie and ITAM (Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México), one of the top business schools in Mexico, whereby groups of Canadian and Mexican students collaborate on a multi-part audit case involving the use of several data analytics tools. I currently advise some universities in Latin America on curriculum revisions to fully incorporate data analytics in most of their courses. In my capacity as CAAA President, I have always emphasized and encouraged initiatives that build bridges between the academic and professional communities, stressing the importance of collaboration between the CAAA and CPA Canada. I was the course coordinator for BUS 254 - Managerial Accounting (2000-17) and I am the course coordinator for Bus 426 – Auditing (2016-Present) and BUS 428 – Forensic Accounting and Data Analytics (2019 – Present)
